How to Deal with a Potentially False Negative? If you take an STD test and get negative test results, the best thing is to get another test after some time. Don't get a repeat test immediately in case it's still during the window period. Wait for a few weeks; around 3-6 weeks. Make sure the repeat test is done at a lab.

If you test positive for a particular disease, it means the test revealed signs of the STD and you may need treatment for it. If the result is negative, the test did not reveal signs of the particular disease.

Depending on the tests you took, you might have different test results for each type of STD. For example, you could test positive for gonorrhea but negative for herpes.
